A warm rain Wednesday morning made traveling treacherous for motorists. For a time many of the roads were as smooth as glass, and much more slippery. Several cars are reported to have done surprising tricks, and it is certain that one car, that of Carl Brown, came to rest in the ditch near Herman Mason's. No serious accidents were reported, and by noon the roads were much safer. The weather this Thursday morning continues like Spring, with about all of last week's snow gone.

BASKETBALL FEATURE FRIDAY

Bethel Independents vs. Rumford Shamrocks at 7:30

Sports fans of Bethel will be treated to probably the biggest bargain in entertainment next Friday night when for the regular price of 35c they can witness two top notch basketball games.

At 7:30 the newly organized Bethel Independents will meet the exceptionally strong Rumford Shamrocks, a professional team of that town. For the locals Jack Parsons and Anderson will start in the forward positions, with Myers and Saunders as guards. Hinkley will play center and George Parsons will be used as a relief man.

This event will be the locals' first opportunity to see the Rumford team in action and should be a fine drawing card.

The local team may not be able to cope very handily with the fast invaders but some good basketball will not doubt be seen on at least one team.

Gould Academy vs. Gorham Normal at 8:30

The Gould Academy varsity will furnish the main event of the evening, encountering the fast Gorham Normal team. Gould has annexed four straight victories and are now in fine shape again after the Christmas holidays. Can they keep up the fine pace thus far set, they should give the fast quintet from Gorham a good battle. The visitors are given a very high rating because of their excellent showing against Cheverus High last Friday in which they were beaten by only three points

Gould's stock is somewhat boosted by the fact that Wilson Bartlett will be eligible to participate in this game. He will most likely play at center although that is not certain.

GOULD ACADEMY RECEIVES ELECTRIC PHONOGRAPH AMPLIFYING SYSTEM FOR GYM

Mrs. Abbie H. C. Finck and her nephew, Carl M. Hansman, have presented Gould Academy an electric phonograph amplifying system to be installed in the William Bingham Gymnasium. This instrument gives the proper amplification so that the records are distinctly audible in all parts of the gymnasium. This gift is greatly appreciated by the faculty and students of Gould Academy who feel that they are deeply indebted to the donors

STILL MORE THAN TWENTY-FIVE COVERED BRIDGES IN STATE

Tourists coming to the State are interested in our covered bridges. There are more than 25 of these in Maine, Fryeburg carrying off the honor with four while Old Town and Dover have three each. Many attempts have been made in Maine to ascertain the origin of this type of bridge but it still remains unanswered question. Although several of these bridges already have been replaced by iron and steel structures, it was not thought that one or more would be left in or near the following places: Auburn, Allagash Plantation, Bethel, Bridgton, Bangor, Cherryfield, Corinna, Farmington, Gorham, Gouldsboro, Lisbon, Leeds, Lincoln Plantation, Limington, Machias Plantation, Naples, Newry, Oxford, Parsonsfield, Presque Isle, Sangerville, Solon, standish, The Forks and Turner

Vico C. Linda, Executive Secretary of the Maine Development Commission, stressed the importance of Maine as a winter as well as a summer recreational state in a talk at a "State of Maine" dinner before the Portland Athletic Club of Portland "As soon as we realize the possibilities of recreational development and that we have as much to offer in Maine in winter as there is in Switzerland, we shall have another great source of revenue," he asserted. Frank P. Washburn, Commissioner of Agriculture, spoke on the relation between agriculture and recreation and showed motion pictures of the various industries and beauty spots of the State. Among the other invited guests were Harris D. Cox, Manager of the Maine Publicity Bureau, Carlton Miles, Publicity Director for the Bureau and Victor H. Rietbeck, Publicity Director for the Maine Development Commission

COMMISSION TO HOLD PUBLIC HEARING AT WEST BETHEL

Notice has been given by the Public Utilities Commission that a public hearing will be held at the West Bethel Grange Hall next Monday, Jan. 18, at 10:30 a. m. This is a result of the announced intention of the Canadian National Railway to discontinue the agency at West Bethel station, which was protested by many citizens, especially in the vicinity of West Bethel. The complaint was without effect and the hearing ordered by the Commission will give all interested an opportunity to set forth their opinions.

CHILDEN'S PROTECTIVE SOCIETY DOES GREAT WORK IN STATE AND DESERVES SUPPORT

There is a charitable organization in the State of Maine, with headquarters at Portland, that is known as The Children's Protective Aid Society of Maine. This organization is entirely supported by private funds and free-will offerings. It is equipped to do all kinds of child-welfare work, but cannot do the grade of work it ought to and can do, because of lack of funds. For this reason it is not always able to make personal investigations, and it cannot always give children coming to its attention the best that they should have.

"This private society belongs to every community and person in the State, but too often it is taken for granted, without consideration of cost of work or source of funds. The Society tries to give each community asking its help as much as that community has put into it, and usually gives more. For example, from three persons in a large, rich town in northwestern Maine, we have received since 1928, eight dollars. Cash expense of our work in that town in the same time amounted to more than sixty dollars.

"There may be an abandoned baby in your town, or a little boy or girl is abused and neglected by parents; or parents may have a behavior problem on their hands; the teacher or school nurse may report defective eyes, tonsils, teeth, with parents unable to pay; the town officials may be up against some tough problem relative to children; perhaps a fourteen-year-old girl has not been attending school for a year or more; a broken home needs patching up; it may be that a young girl has been wronged; or a judge needs an expert investigator.

The Children's Protective Aid Society of Maine knows how to handle all this and much more, in the kindest way. It has a corps of able lawyers ready to give advice and help. It is your Society, but to function, it must have your material support. It is not within our power to give something for nothing. When you need us, remember that the need is mutual and that your interest should be substantial. The Children's Protective Society of Maine, 142 Federal Street, Portland, Maine

EAMES'S BETTER BUSINESS SPECIAL TO START JAN. 30

"As Maine goes, so goes the Nation" writes J. C. Mohler, secretary of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture, in extending official welcome of Kansas to Maine and the Better Business Train which is to leave this State on January 30, touring 6,400 miles through 23 States in the Union. "Kansas has a high appreciation of Maine and a lofty regard for her enterprising and sturdy people," continues Mr. Mohler, "and I am sure you can look forward to a very gratifying reception." He hails the train as a prosperity stimulus for the nation.

Expressing the opinion that "As Maine goes, so goes the Nation" Kansas is willing to concede has general application, Mr. Mohler says further: "I congratulate the State of Maine in sending out the train in order that the rest of the country may also know more about your great State."

Bearing displays of Maine made products, the special train will leave Maine the last Saturday in January, returning February 13. Personnel of the party will be limited to 125, and all who have the interest of Maine at heart may make reservations. Special reduced rates have been granted by all railroads over which the train will travel, and aside from affording opportunities to "Boost Maine" the trip will be complete with pleasures. Receptions are being arranged at the 23 places where stops will be made, and a warm welcome for the party from State and National leaders.

Members of the Maine Tour Committee, planning State-wide exploitation of this project are urging citizens of each town to join in an active participation to fill to capacity the accommodations of the passenger cars. The finest of railroad equipment is to be placed at the disposal of the Maine party, and with transportation costs at a decidedly reduced rate.

Official sponsorship of the train has been given by Governor Gardiner, Associated Industries of Maine, Maine Development Commission, State Agricultural Department, Maine State Chamber of Commerce and Agricultural League, Maine Publicity Bureau, and the Portland Centennial Committee, through which agencies information may be obtained as to cost, which is also available through the headquarters of the Maine Tour Committee in the Congress Building, Portland. Printed copies of the proposed itinerary, and descriptive features of the communities to be visited will be mailed to all who desire, the Committee has announced.

ALBERT COOLIDGE EAMES

Albert C. Eames passed away in Burlingame, Calif., Jan. 1, 1932, following an operation for an intestinal obstruction.

He was born in Bethel, Me., Aug. 15, 1872, the only son of William Russell and Elizabeth Barker Eames. He was educated in the schools of his native town, graduating from Gould Academy and Bowdoin College.

Later he studied law and entered the employ of the Maryland Casualty Company, and for the past ten years has been manager of the Western division of that company, with his office at San Francisco, but having charge of the branches in the Western States as far East as Denver, Colo.

He married Dr. Edna Sherrill of Portland, Oregon, and they had one daughter.

Mr. Eames was exceedingly modest and unassuming, a great lover of his home and garden in Burlingame. He always had a royal welcome for his Eastern friends wherever he met them in the West, and he made a wonderful success of his life and his business.

He is survived by his wife and daughter Betty, also by two sisters, (Ella) Mrs. Walter Emery of Bethel, (Ethel) Mrs. James O'Neil of Boston, and several nieces and nephews, who are crushed by the heartbreaking news of his death. An older sister (Mary) Mrs. Clyde Bean, died in Ohio, Iowa, about 15 years ago.

GOULD TAKES DOUBLE HEADER FROM SOUTH PARIS

Gould Varsity 19, So. Paris 16; Gould Seconds 30, So. Paris 26

In two thrilling contests the Gould Academy basketball teams bested their Oxford County rivals by narrow margins.

The fact that South Paris led the winners by one point at the ends of the first, second, and third periods is an indication of how keenly contested was the play. The Paris outfit surprised the visitors by playing a tight man to man defense.

With one minute and thirty-five seconds to play with the score 16-15 for South Paris, Captain Stanley having already played steller ball, dribbled three-quarters the length of the floor to drop in a beauty shot that put Gould in the lead. Academy backers went wild with enthusiasm. Within the last minute of play Stanley dropped in his second basket on the same to clinch the victory. It was a great victory for Gould and a hard one to lose for South [illegible] having covered the Gould [illegible] ground for nearly the entire game.

STATE DEPARTMENT URGES TOWNS TO RAISE MONEY FOR SCHOOL NURSE WORK

A letter from Dr. C. F. Kendall, Director of the State Department of Health, to the various town clerks, tells of the value of school nurses in inspection and follow-up work and asks that article to raise money for this purpose be included in the warrant for annual town meeting. To quote from the letter:

"The children are our most precious possessions and they have a right to expect health protection in the home, in the schools they attend and in the community in which they live.' Will you not help to procure this appropriation so that your town's children may have the opportunity of having defects found which might otherwise exist unrecognized until advancement in school work is retarded and physical health seriously impaired."

The following amounts are asked for towns in this vicinity: Bethel, $251; Mason, $10; Greenwood, $102; Gilead, $23; Hanover, $18; Upton, $17; Newry, $34

TWO-MINUTE SERMON
by REV. GEORGE HENRY

APPRECIATION

When a man says he cares nothing for poetry, we waste no sympathy on Shakespeare; we are sorry for the intellectual pauper who makes the confession. When a man on the train lights a cigar, produces a pack of cards, hunts up a partner and plays poker all the way from Chicago to Omaha, never once glancing at the scenery, we do not feel sorry for God because his wonders are not appreciated, but for this blind and deaf one. When a man tells us that he "has no use for the church" we do not feel that sentence is being passed on the church, or on religion, but on the critic. Appreciation is gratifying to the poet, to God and to the church; but the chief beneficiary is the man who is conscious of the delights and the opportunities and the privileges of life—who is thankful for the blessings and beauty with which he is surrounded. Don't hesitate to express your appreciation of an act of kindness or a word of sympathy and cheer. You will thus double your blessings and your soul will grow big within you.

GOULD ACADEMY
Gould Academy was incorporated by act of the Legislature, Jan. 27, 1836, and opened the following September. Since that time the school has continued in active operation, and has always enjoyed a large share of public confidence. The school aims not only to prepare its students for college and other higher institutions of learning, but, through the foundation of correct habits of thought and action, to fit them to face wisely the problems that will confront them in later life. Its present standards and methods are such as the most earnest educators of the day are approving.
The present standing of the school, its equipment, its courses, its ideals, are to a large extent the fulfillment of the vision of Dr. Frank E. Hanscom, who has been its principal since 1897. In recent years, through the generosity of William Bingham 2d, a fine gymnasium, girls' dormitory and head-master's house have been erected, and the other buildings remodelled and equipped for most efficient work.
Five courses of study—Classical, Scientific, Manual Arts, Home Economics, and Commercial—are offered. Each course is of four years and designed to be of equally high standard of requirements. The Academy is approved by the New England College Entrance Certificate Board.

Forgotten Heroes

By Elmo Scott Watson

"We Had a Fight"

FOR directness and conciseness in telling a thrilling tale of high adventure, you can't beat the United States army officers of the old Indian fighting days. In the dust-covered files of the War department at Washington is the story of a battle, as told by Capt. L. L. Williams of the First Oregon infantry, which took place on Selvie's river in Oregon in 1865. He starts out by saying "To the Commanding Officer, Sir: I have the honor to report that we had a fight with Indians, which commenced at noon, September 23, and ended at 7 p. m." Then he goes on to relate in a most matter-of-fact way the story of that day.

Captain Williams had set out with a detachment of 12 men to cut wild hay. Following a fresh Indian trail leading toward Harney's lake, they discovered a small party of Indians a mile away and gave chase. After a pursuit of seven miles some mounted Indians appeared and bore the fugitives away.

But the Indians soon reappeared, greatly reinforced and "immediately a body of mounted Indians rode hard to us circling us and firing into our ranks." Williams ordered a retreat toward a mountain but the savages cut them off from their objective. There was but one alternative, to turn directly right, travel parallel to the mountain and make for Selvie's river five miles away.

Finally they reached the river, slaked their thirst and started up the bank, still under continual fire. Two men were wounded and had to be helped along by their comrades. At sundown the camp was still four miles away and as soon as it was dark the Indians set fire to the grass across their line of march. They managed to break through, but finding that they would be silhouetted against the flames and an easy target for the Indians' fire, they had to backtrack and travel five miles away from camp. We then made a large circle, successfully reaching our camp at 2 a. m., having traveled 45 miles afoot without rest, without food, with one drink of water and having been under fire for over seven hours by Indians who outnumbered us six or seven to one. It is certain we killed 15 Indians and wounded a number, as well as horses." And all this Capt. L. L. Williams summed up in his first sentence—"We had a fight."

YOU and I

By CHARLES S. KINNISON

ONE LITTLE LIE

If I, with you, would truthful be
For twenty years, let's say—
You'd have implicit faith in me
That grew from day to day.
And if some folks, upon my name
Would try to cast a blot—
Your confidence I still would claim,
For you'd believe them not!

But let you catch me in a lie,
Just once—I'd find, alack,
Your faith in me would quickly die,
And never more come back!
However long the years may run,
Through which I've held your trust—
One lie from me and all I've won
Of faith will turn to dust!

All Clear Sailing After the Fog

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

BLUE sky, blue seas, blue eyes looking into his!

"I wouldn't call the king my own cousin!" cried Forrester Knowlton, as he helped Peggy Sanford into his shining mahogany speed boat. "Where shall he go—North pole, South pole, or merely the blue Canary Isles?"

Pretty Peggy laughed. "Personally, I'd choose the Blue Canary Isles, if it weren't for worrying Aunt Georgiana. As it is, how about Tamarack cove?"

"You're captain!" said Forrester, and the next moment they were off.

The two of them were members of a Murray bay house party and had been irresistibly drawn to one another from the very start, although it seemed at times as if Aunt Georgiana were contriving to keep them apart.

But now he had her to himself for a whole afternoon with the blue summer skies over them and the blue St. Lawrence stretching ahead.

Little was said until, suddenly and quite on the impulse of the moment, Forrester reached across to where Peggy sat in a cretonne-covered chair and possessed himself of her hand.

Slowly she withdrew it, a troubled look in her eyes. "Please—"

Forrester's heart sank. "I wasn't just playing, Peggy," he said hoarsely. "I—I am quite crazy about you. I want you for my wife."

Peggy lifted a pair of miserable eyes to his. "It's impossible!" she said.

"Impossible? Then you must care for someone else?"

"Oh no!" cried Peggy quickly. "That is—I mean—well, I'm engaged to Lester."

Forrester stared, unable to believe what he had heard. True, he wasn't her own cousin and yet—why, everyone, including his own family, knew what sort of a boy Lester was. Weak, unable to resist temptation of any sort.

"Peggy—" he began desperately.

But Peggy interrupted him. "Look, Forrester, is that smoke?"

Forrester looked ahead where a formless gray cloud was blotting out their view.

"Fog," he said briefly, "rolling in from the ocean." With a turn of the wheel, he swung the Starling about so sharply she showed her blades above water. "We'll have to race it home," he said.

At that instant, the engine sputtered, caught, and died. With an exclamation, Forrester sprang to the task. Then he groaned. "Hang Lester! I let him have that boat all the week-end and told him to be sure and fill up at the landing. Instead he turned in the reserve and we've been running on that."

He was too concerned over his discovery to notice that Peggy's eyes had widened suddenly at the mention of Lester's name. It was important that they get out of the ticklish situation they were in. Already, cool wisps of the incoming fog were brushing their faces.

"Take the wheel and keep her headed toward that point," he directed his companion.

Reaching under the cushioned seat, he extracted a half length of oar, used in fending when the usual bumpers proved inadequate:

"We'll just about make it," he said quietly, and set to work.

After what seemed an interminable length of time but was in reality little more than a couple of hours, the bow of the Starling nosed the sandy beach that stretched at the foot of a low bluff.

"We'll find the main road not far from the river," said Forrester confidently, "and follow it to the town."

He turned to lend the girl a helping hand up the bank, and to his intense surprise, found it pressed between both of his.

"Wait, Forrester," she said shyly. "I—I think I am no longer engaged to Lester. I did it in the beginning to please Aunt Georgiana, who, after all, is only a sort of step-aunt, but she has been wonderfully good to me. But Lester has deceived me. He told me yesterday he had to go to Three Rivers in the runabout—that there wouldn't be room for me. Instead, he took Genevieve Roberts out in your boat.

"I know I am right, for I saw them close on the dock very early in the morning, and last night I overheard her tell Aunt Georgiana she had been steering the Starling all day. I thought she had been with you."

The man nodded gravely. "A bit clearer to me now," he said. "Those extra gas cans we had to mention [illegible] I [illegible] if I were [illegible] Peggy, she looked up into the lovely blue eyes uplifted to his and he knew what it meant.

10:45 Morning Worship. Pastor's theme, "At the Cross Roads."

If we ever hope to reach our destination, it is tremendously important which road we take. We are living in an age when there are a thousand hands beckoning us to enter other roads; and along them alluring signs that seek to beguile the unwary. But Jesus said, "I am the way."

No man has ever found the Jesus way an easy road, but it leads up and it leads home.

As to the farce that the 18th Amendment is responsible for this period of depression. The Wets would like to make us think so. What about Finland's vote to repeal its prohibition law? As to the Wets' claim that Finland is pointing the way for America, but to where is it pointing? To the open saloon which the Wets are craving to bring back. Come and hear this question discussed.

OXFORD COUNTY UNITED PARISH

Embracing Albany, Center and North Lovell, Stoneham and Waterford. Pastoral Staff: Revs. W. L. Hull (absent) H. V. Brandon, V. C. Townsend and Roderick W. Hurlburt, supplying during the absence of Mr. Hull.

The first monthly meeting of the Council was held at East Stoneham last Thursday. While there was but little business to be transacted there was a good opportunity for fellowship. A fine dinner was served by the Ladies' Circle of East Stoneham, and in the afternoon a very helpful and inspiring address on "The Parables of Jesus" was delivered by Rev. Clifford V. Wood of the Lone Valley Larger Parish. Those who heard it declared it was worth the effort of having the meeting.

The finances of the United Parish were reported to be in a satisfactory condition in spite of the present hard times [illegible].

On account of expenses and other problems to storekeepers, the social activities of the parish are somewhat curtailed, but plans and preparations are under way for the Winter Carnival and several dances which have been set for February 15th.

As was done a year ago, the Sunday services at Albany are not being held in the church at Hunt's Corner, but are being alternated between the Clark schoolhouse and the Town House schoolhouse. These schoolhouse services are very well attended, and by some who could not conveniently go to the church.

Services are held alternately at East Waterford and South Waterford.

Windows Express Home

Windows give the expression to the face of a house. Some day architects may take to specializing as doctors do, to prescribe for your window troubles.—American Magazine.

"With" or "From"

"To differ with" or "differ from" depends on the thought that is conveyed. In the case of a disagreement "I differ with you" would be correct. A person "differs from" another in [illegible] of other differences.

RESOLUTIONS
on the Death of Sister Georgia McCurdy

Whereas, it has pleased the Divine Master to call our worthy and beloved Sister, Georgia McCurdy, to the higher life of the Land Beautiful, be it therefore

Resolved, That Upton Grange has lost a Sister whose love, loyalty and esteem for this great Order, P. of H., can not be questioned and while we sorrow for our loss we must be cheered by the thought that what is our loss is her great gain.

Resolved, That our Charter be draped for thirty days and that these resolutions be spread upon our records, a copy sent to each brother, and a copy to the Oxford County Citizen for publication.

She came as a stranger to us; she had a sweet, worn face,
And to us who learned to love her she had beauty and sweet grace.
And, Oh, the light of love shone through those eyes, dimmed by life's pain,
And all the lives that her life touched, forever better would remain.
And, Oh, the beauty that she left, in every place she went,
Even the sky o'er head seemed darkened, when her days here were all spent
A companion to the lonely, to all friendly ones a friend,
And the little children loved her, from the first until the end.
So I pay this passing tribute; as I shed a parting tear,
She is not dead, she is just away; we'll meet again, we need not fear.
For through this plain and worn out clay, there shone something most divine
That will live on through the ages—wondrous—grand—sublime.

The Seahorse

The tiny seahorse gallops along over the coral of the warm tropical sea safely encased in a bony armor. Municipal aquariums throughout the country have specimens of this interesting little fish, which must be kept in salt water similar to that of its sea home. It is so called because of its startling resemblance to our equine friend. It, too, feeds on grass, of course, of a certain kind, and disposes itself as lively as any colt of the pastureland.

Stops Headache in Five Minutes

A Wonderful Formula Ends Aches and Pains Almost Like Magic.
Something Better and Safer?

Thousands of men and women are now stopping throbbing, sick, dizzy, splitting headaches, as well as the excruciating pains of rheumatism, neuritis, toothache, etc., with a marvelous new formula that is said to be far superior to anything heretofore used.

It contains no aspirin, acetanilid, etc., and is absolutely safe and harmless. This remarkable formula, called A-VOL, is being prescribed by thousands of doctors, dentists and welfare nurses because of the quick, efficient way it relieves all types of aches and pains without depressing the heart, or causing any other harmful effects. Why Called "Nasbys"

Postal officials are called Nasbys from the fact that D. R. Locke many years ago wrote a series of articles for a Toledo paper and signed them "Petroleum Vesuvius Nasby, Postmaster at X Roads, which is in the state of Kentucky." For a time Locke had pretended to be an old time ignorant whisky drinking, negro-hating politician who was determined to be postmaster of the "post orifice" at "Confederit X Road, Ky.," a position then held by a "nigger." At any rate, the comic papers of Nasby were very popular throughout the country and it was in those days that "Nasby" was saddled upon postmasters and postal clerks as a title [illegible]
